PERSONALITY: YI WOOD DAY MASTER

Your Day Master in a nutshell is the BASIC YOU. The inborn personality. It is your essential characters, strengths and weaknesses. It answers the basic question of "Who Am I".

- Overview of Yi Wood Day Master

The image which best personifies Yi Wood is that of soft, pliable twines, shoots, leaves and flowers. The pliability of Yi Wood encapsulates the overall essence of what a Yi Wood personality is like – gentle, flexible, subtle but filled with intelligence to thrive. If you are a Yi Wood personality, you also possess quick wits, a tactful and sensitive nature with a generous amount of creativity and wiles about you which help you to succeed. You do not take root to one place unlike a tree with its deep roots, and tend to feel a need for change and constant improvement.

With your social abilities, sharp mind and keen ability to communicate, you are a force to be reckoned with in team settings. When you lead, you do so with an open-door approach and your subordinates and colleagues find it easy to seek your opinion and guidance.

Although you sometimes veer on the crafty side due to your natural talent in convincing others, you are insecure and long for approval and approbation from others. This stems from your bending and pliable nature which brings forth numerous strengths but also some areas for you to improve on.

*"Knowing others is interligence;
Knowing yourself is true wisdom.
Mastering other is strength,
Mastering yourself is true power"*

Personality Snapshot

Attributes: Gentle, Intelligent, Adaptable, Emotional

Nature: Astute and Fast Thinker, Relationship Builder,
Reliance on Others for Positive Self-Worth

As a Yi Wood personality, you are blessed with a beautiful nature like that of a flowering plant. Those around you will attest to your gentleness, calmness and elegance. You project a soft-spoken aura of sophistication and courtesy and people are easily drawn to your presence.

Your gentleness is a perfect foil to your intellect and creativity. You are able to attract others not only with your charm but also with your thoughts and insights. Being able to put into words what you think and feel comes easily as you have a keenness of the mind – this extends to your humour and enhances your communication skills.

Whilst being intelligent, Yi Wood personalities are also diplomatic and tactful. You are a consensus builder and although you may keep your opinions to yourself usually and hear others out, when the situation warrants it you will definitely speak up and are usually the person responsible for creating a resolution based on group consensus.

Your adaptability to see the best way forward and how to get to success may sometimes lead you to change too much. You must learn to stay by your principles and not end up being thought of as a scheming and manipulative person who gets his or her way with decisions that change with the wind.

Your mental agility incorporates positive points of quick-thinking, astute observations and the ability to obtain feedback. As a decision-maker you are able to look at a problem through the many facets it may present. You are able to take in feedback from others and often seek their opinions to add value to your decisions. However, having no firmly held beliefs may lead to a lack of depth in the final resolution. In addition, you will need to strengthen your thinking and judgment abilities by controlling your emotions in order that your feelings do not get in the way of sound decision-making. Do not be overly hasty, greedy or accommodative to others' requests. Consider in-depth each and every problem by cross-checking with your own knowledge, experience, that of trusted friends and remember to stay with your principles and never get carried away by the moment.

In terms of your self-worth, you thrive and derive great satisfaction from the positive remarks, compliments and praises you obtain from others. This in turn leads you to wanting more limelight which may lead you to make ill-informed choices in life. You will need to be aware of your attention-seeking ways and instead choose to grow your self-confidence via other channels – like from developing other skills, believing in yourself and deriving satisfaction from being yourself, not who others want you to be.

Some key areas which you can further improve on as a Yi Wood personality include:

- a) Control your emotions in order that all your thoughts, words and actions are well thought out and not impulse-driven.
- b) As you are sociable person interested in networking and relationship-building, place yourself with friends who are knowledgeable and intelligent and you will benefit from their insights. Just watch yourself that you do not turn every occasion into an attention-seeking event and you will be able to garner much additional knowledge from others.
- c) Belief in yourself and let your strengths shine through. Do not let the views of others affect your self-worth.

Your intelligence, keen mind and capability to articulate your thoughts enable you to convince others and you usually do get what you want by using your charms and gifted way in speaking. Be careful however not to dwell on the unhealthy side of this strength which leads to your wiles and charm turning into manipulation and craftiness.

"One cool judgement is worth a thousand hasty counsels."

Woodrow T. Wilson

"Surround yourself with only people who are going to lift you higher."

Oprah Winfrey

As you are one for networking and relationship-building, continue to surround yourself with friends and acquaintances who are knowledgeable, as your keen mind will likely benefit from their inputs. You are likely to develop further among them, gaining from their feedback and advice. This will help your confidence to soar and you will get the attention you desire, without seeking for it.

At all times choose to place your opinion in balance with that of others. Consider yourself worthy and do not let insecurity breed. Remember your strengths and abilities and let them shine.

"Always be a first-rate version of yourself, instead of a second-rate version of somebody else."

Judy Garland

YOUR MONEY MANAGEMENT SKILLS

Your Work Personality

While some people are like steady flames, you are definitely more of a bright spark! Yi Wood personalities are known for their creativity, flexibility, adaptability and teamwork. You thrive on being able to tackle issues where you are able to articulate on the intricacies involved and then to design a solution which uses your creativity. New ideas and solutions to problems are easy for you and your mental agility and sharp responses usually hit the mark. This makes you someone that others like to work with – and it is bolstered by your preference for teamwork, consensus and an approach which leverages on the feedback and opinion of others.

Your flexibility and adaptability extends to the way you manage your career. It makes you fit into the mould of the present day employee who is someone likely to change their job environment on a regular scale. Too much of the same job and you lose interest quickly. But according to an article in the Harvard Business Review, written by Professor Monika Hamori, job-hopping may not be the best strategy. You may instead consider taking a job which is project-based in order that you can experience different things all the time may be what is best for you.

Your strength in communication – which is supported well by your gentleness, elegance, charm, diplomacy and wits – easily endears you to your workmates and you can best apply this in situations which require you to negotiate or where a joint decision is required. This translates into strength when you are made a leader as you are able to convince and inspire those around you to take on the roles which showcase their talents. However, try to ensure that while you can win people over, never do it in order to get what you want as this will surely jeopardise your relationship with others.

As a Yi Wood personality, you believe in teamwork and that a sound working relationship is one that is best.

Your Business Sense

When it comes to business, Yi Wood personalities are always motivated to do more. Never basking in previous successes for long, you are proactive and resourceful which drives you to keep on searching for ways to do better. This is complemented by your ability to convince, motivate and inspire others to do what is required in order that your goals are met. When you run a business, you are able to group together your team of colleagues and employees and have them go the distance with you.

Toyota is a brand you identify with. Their principle of 'jidoka' – where quality takes precedence – strikes a chord with you. You prioritise quality as a key method to gaining market share and customers' confidence. In order to achieve this, your creativity and adaptability will assist you to fine tune your products and services – creating greater value and improvements along the way.

You hold on to traditional values of business ethics – where the customer is king. In this regard, you ensure that what the customer gets is the best. While this is also done to protect the image of your business, it remains the main ingredient in obtaining the long term trust of your customers, which you ably cultivate with your good relationship-building skills, diplomacy and easygoing nature.

Your Relationship with Co-Workers and Peers

Yi Wood personalities have a strong ethical and moral standard, believing in operating in a principled manner. Likewise, you tend to guide your workmates and colleagues into your line of reasoning. Teaching and guiding others is second nature and something that your sociable and communicative self likes. However, be careful of imposing your principles and beliefs on those who do not share them. Always allow room for the other party to have their own set of beliefs. In many instances, agreeing to disagree may be the right mantra for you.

Due to your sense of self-worth being tied to others' perception of you, you will try to impress at every opportunity. Be aware of your verbal warrior persona and avoid turning discussions into heavy sessions of debate. It may be better to use your gentle and tactful attributes and to keep the conversation light so that both parties are able to relate on a larger scale.

When dealing with your others at your workplace, you are able to use your intelligence and charm to the best effect. Watch yourself as you are able to charm others into doing what you want but this may not bear the best fruit in the long term.

Your Money Management Skills

While you are creative, this side of you does not extend to management of financial resources. When you are placed in a position at work which requires you to manage the finances, you will usually prefer to follow others' opinion or do what others seem to be doing. Financial management is definitely not your strength, and to master it you may well have to learn many things through the hard and arduous route. But do not worry, there are more than enough books advocating advice from financial gurus out there and you can take your pick from Suze Orman, Dave Ramsey, Warren Buffett, Peter Lynch, Charles Schwab and so many more. Be careful though and do not to take high risks before your build the necessary skills or ability to help you assess if the rewards are well-matched to the risks you may have to take.

Professional Growth Recommendations

As a Yi Wood personality you thrive on being in a social environment as your wit and flair easily places you in the centre of attention. You should continue to leverage on this relationship-building ability, while also tapping onto other strengths and improving certain weaknesses in your work approach and leadership style. Below is a list of key areas to monitor and address in order to obtain the greatest benefit of being a Yi Wood personality.

	Work Personality
Be principled and sincere	Watch your own intentions and always act based on your principles. Never be swayed by emotion and learn to make all forms of communication sincere even if you can get away with insincerity due to your gift and ability as a good communicator.
Practice a little formality	With your informal style of leadership, some employees may think that you can be easily swayed. Learn to inject a certain level of formality into your work relationships and to create a little distance. This will keep employees respectful even as you maintain a healthy, friendly and approachable style of leadership.
Create learning opportunities	Create opportunities for yourself to learn new things and expand your role at work as you are one that is easily bored and this may lead you to change jobs quite frequently. Remember that although in the modern world, job-hopping is no longer unacceptable, in certain instances a rolling stone gathers no moss and it may be in your interest to remain in a position for a bit longer.
Build your A-Team	Draw on your skills in assessing others to develop a team of talents which you are able to guide and support; and which will in turn support you.

Innovate for qualityBusiness Sense

At work, tap into your creativity to support your beliefs that quality and customer satisfaction is the key to a successful business. The generation of new ideas, new products and new services may well benefit your company or business.

Inspire all towards the higher goalRelationship with Your Co-workers and Peers

As you are able to convince and inspire others, lead by example and choose a higher target as you have both the motivation and ability to motivate your team to reach it.

Knowledge is powerMoney Management Skills

Learn, learn, learn and then educate yourself some more. This is in order to overcome the follower in you that prefers to follow others' opinions in areas of financial matters. At work, obtain feedback from others while continuing to build on your own knowledge.

Work Style

To maximise the best of your strengths at the workplace, you should draw on the areas where you excel. Always remember to move towards the healthy reflection of each attribute that you possess as a Yi Wood personality.

Possessing a natural magnetic charm which is drawn from your gentle, elegant, intelligent, sophisticated side, you are naturally attractive and draw others to you. You can best use this ability and shine in situations where work calls for team effort, negotiation or joint discussions.

Key Facts:

- * Utilize on your charm
- * Friendly and approachable
- * Always ask for the best
- * Hang on to your principle

Use your astute mind and articulate speech to analyse each problem or issue and then to proceed to explain it. This way, you are able to lead well as you can identify the problem at hand, communicate it to your subordinates and have them work on the details – this being especially since you are not one to dwell on the intricacies of each issue. In addition, your preferred way of leading which is based on a friendly and approachable style will easily endear you to your subordinates. This is as long as you monitor any tendency for manipulation of others to do your bidding. Remember to treat everyone with respect and let them have their own beliefs and you will be a respected leader.

Continue to demand for the best quality for your clients as this will earmark you as a trusted businessperson – whether you work for a company or operate your own business. In the long term, the customers' trust will sustain the growth and increase the value of your company or business.

Hang on to your principles even as you allow others room to have their own. Your principles will help you to reflect and make better decisions. This is necessary as you are someone who is easily swayed by emotions and the opinions of others. Seeking to impress, comply or agree with another can make you choose the wrong option or decide badly.

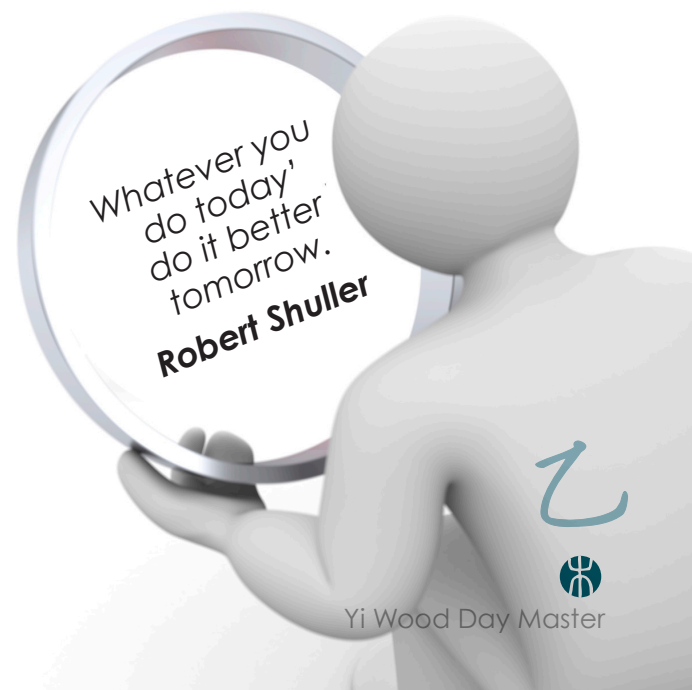

If you are placed in a role which requires management of finances, ensure that you have a team of able people who can advise and support you. In addition, make sure you put in the required leg work to know the facts and restrain yourself from impulsive and risky behaviour.
